CAN YOU GUESS.

Here's a Chance to Make Ten Dollars Easy.

All You Have to Do is Pick the Winners in the Coming Primary.

Just for the interest attached to a guessing contest and to put a little more interest into the coming campaign for County officers, The News will give its readers a chance to make ten dollars and have a little fun at guessing on the side.

To the person making the first nearest correct guess of the winners in the Democratic Primary Election which will be held in this county on Saturday, June 1st, 1901, The News will present a ten dollar gold piece. The conditions of the contest are simple. Old subscribers and new subscribers who pay $2 on their subscriptions will each be entitled to a guess, and to as many guesses as they pay year's subscription. If no one guesses correctly, the first one who guesses the closest to all the winners will receive the ten dollars.

You intend to pay your subscription anyway, and you may as well pay before the first day of June and have a chance of getting your money back, besides gaining the distinction of knowing more about the political situation than your neighbors.

Each guess will be registered when received as to the exact day, hour and minute. No one will be permitted to see how any one else has guessed. In guessing only the offices on the ballot are to be considered.

Sometimes the imitation of Nature's forces on the stage surpasses the real thing. Franklin Kyles says that once at a rehearsal of the storm scene in Shakespeare's "Coriolanus," the tragedian, Edwin Forrest, was asked: "How was that peal of thunder?" "Not a bit like the real thing," he replied, testily; "you must do better than that!" "Oh, we can," said the manager; "but there happens to be a thunder storm outside, and the clap was the real thing."

DRUNKENNESS IN RUSSIA.

New Laws In Czar's Domain Are Very Severe.

The new Russian laws against drunkenness are very severe. All persons found intoxicated in streets and public places are sentenced to terms of imprisonment varying from three days to two weeks. A repetition of the offense is punishable with three months imprisonment. It is said that the effect of this law, which has just become operative, will be, if rigidly applied, to throw 10 per cent of the population into jail.

An official report of the liquor traffic in Russia, which is largely in the hands of the government, has just been issued. The annual sales amount to about $4,000,000 gallons and the gross receipts to $1,175,000,000. The retail sale of liquor is restricted to places where food is also furnished. The Russian peasant classes drink vodka, a liquor distilled from rye, which is sold at the average price of $1.45 per gallon.

It is worth noting in connection with the new Russian laws that an English royal commission presided over by Lord Peel recently recommended that drunkenness per se in public places should henceforth be considered an offense against the law.

FOR THE FARMER

Too long have the farmers been like those who, in the memorable "Charge of the Six Hundred."

They're not to reason why, They're but to do or die.

Today the farmer is seeking to know why one method produces better results than another under certain conditions and fails to do so under other conditions. Not only are they trying to profit by the experiments made at the stations, but by the experience of others who have been successful, and they feel that the results others have reached are but little use unless they learn how they were brought about. This is the most encouraging indication of future prosperity for agriculture. It is this which is gradually if slowly increasing the average production of farm crops and farm stock toward the maximum attained by the best among them. This increased productivity is that gives us reason to hope despite the predictions of a few croakers that the time is far distant when the United States or the world at large will not be able to supply the necessities of the rapidly increasing population. We feel no fear that this time will come to this country during the lifetime of many now living, for we believe the farmers are gaining knowledge of the needs of their soil, their crops and animals much faster than the number of those dependent on them for food is increasing.

Warm Food For Stock.

We once had a man, says a writer in American Cultivator, who thought that a cold dinner when at work in the woods in winter enabled him to do more work in the afternoon than he could have done if he had been provided with a warm dinner and hot drinks, but he was a worker and exercised himself at his work. Others have thought differently, and we think that the cows giving milk or the animal that is fattening would do much better on warm food and drink in winter, because we do not wish to have them take much exercise to warm up their systems. But to give warm food and warm water to animals and then make them stand out in the cold until the effects of the heat they had gained had all passed away leaves them worse than before. Keep them in warm stables and give warm food and warm water, and they will surely realize that it is not summer when they are in the barn. The horses and oxen that are obliged to be out eight or ten hours each day are but little benefited by warming their food and water, unless it is at night, after the day's work is over. The warmth is a stimulant, and they are not of much use when one has to continue exposure to cold.
When the reaction takes place, it lessens their ability to do much as much as it has increased it when first given.

Good Utility Cattle.

In comparison with their rivals, the Jerseys, it is somewhat remarkable that Guernseys have not become more popular, both for profit and for fancy, especially as their claims in these respects are so well founded. Being generally of a rich orange color, with white markings, having a yellow skin and gentle expression, their general appearance is at once very striking and attractive. As utility cattle their claims are undoubted, the cows yielding a generous amount of the very best color and quality is obtained. This excellence is much in their favor and is very often taken advantage of by those who keep cows of other breeds for the production of milk and butter and find it necessary and beneficial to have a cow or two in the herd in order to add to the richness of the milk and the quality and appearance of the butter.

New Crop Rotation.

A studious reader of The National Stockman and Farmer proposes to use the following crop rotation on his stock farm: Corn, cowpeas, wheat and clover. He wants feed for sheep and hogs and horses. His experience leads him to believe that the peas will provide rich hay, and if the weather prevents the making of a big acreage of them the hogs will be used to harvest part of them. Probably part of them would be used for pasture anyway.
He counts upon good wheat and clover after the peas. The corn stubble will be seeded to clover, to be turned under for peas. No ground will be left bare.
Three years out of four each field will be producing feed, and in two of these years the soil should be gaining in fertility. The fourth year produces a cash crop without any manure, clover and manure the farm should grow richer while bringing income.

Questions About Flax.

Sow in spring as early as the season will admit, same as oats. As for kind of soil, it doesn't make much difference. Like wheat and oats, the better the soil the better the crop. It is not likely to fall down, as it has a good stalk or stem.

Sow one bushel to the acre or if soil is thin less and if extra good more.
Plow, harrow and get ground in good shape as you can with harrow, then sow and roll to get the ground in good shape to mow. I used to mow with scythe, but that would be too slow for these days, but if you have an old mower use it, for it is hard on a machine.

Cows For the Farm.

The farmer who owns 100 acres of tiltable land ought to have at least six cows. Three of the six cows ought to raise six calves. The other three would supply milk and butter for the family and keep the "better half" in pin money.

BENJAMIN BIXBY, P. D. F.

By E. W. Coolidge.

"And now, Ben Bixby," said I, "suppose you tell me what have your hands found to do?"

He placed in my hand a bit of bristol upon which was inscribed, "Benjamin Bixby, P. D. F., 2742 Greene street, third floor, telephone central 18267."

"P. D. F.?" said I, rather puzzled.
"Professor of decimal fractions?"

"Wrong; perpetrator of domestic felicity." And he grinned at my bewilderment.

"Well," said I, slightly nettled, "what the deuce does that imply?"

"The most noble occupation in the world, the greatest boon ever bestowed upon mankind; my own idea, my own conception—the worthy child of my great, throbbing heart and my keen, observing intellect. It has worked a revolution in the family circle, and called down the blessings of humanity upon Benjamin Bixby, sir."

"Explain yourself," said I impatiently.

"For ages the private life of busy men—of men of great mental energy—has been rendered more or less unhappy by dissensions in the household caused, unfortunately, by the busy man's forgetfulness. Simple and unimportant matters intrusted to his care by his wife—the matter of mailing a letter, ascertaining railroad connections, sending a man to fix the furnace and other commissions of like character—have slipped his memory, burdened as it was with mightier affairs. These little omissions have caused many a heartache, many a tear, many a hasty word; yes, too often they have been the entering wedge which finally split asunder the happiness of the home."

"These unfortunate circumstances came early to my attention. No doubt you also noticed them years ago, but perhaps your heart does not throbb so compassionately for bleeding humanity as does Benjamin Bixby's. At all events, I determined to discover some plan of righting the evil, for I believe every ill has a remedy."
"This resulted in my adopting my present occupation, which from the beginning has been commended by those whom it was designed to benefit. My success has been wonderful. Hundreds of the most influential citizens of this mighty metropolis look upon Benjamin Bixby as a godsend." And the perpetrator of domestic felicity rubbed his hands again and grinned.

"You talk in riddles," said I.

"On the contrary," he replied, "nothing could be more simple. I remind my patrons of that which has slipped their memories. How? Well, we will suppose that in the evening after dinner, while Mr. Richard Roe is scanning his favorite paper in his drawing room, his wife suddenly observes: 'I wish you would send a man to fix that range, Richard. It smokes dreadfully. And, oh, yes, I want you to step into the bank and purchase a draft, and don't forget to secure seats for the opera Thursday evening.'"

"Now, in the old days Mr. Roe would have trusted to memory, faithfully promised his wife to attend to the matters on the morrow and then—immediately proceeded to forget them entirely.
"But advancement is the demand of the hour, and all this domestic trouble is now entirely avoided, thanks to the intellect and great throbbing heart of Benjamin Bixby, P. D. F." And my friend of former days beamed enthusiastically upon me.

"No more does Mr. Roe trust to memory or memorandum. While the matter is on his mind he steps to the telephone and calls up central 18267, which instrument is in my office, as you will observe by reference to my card."

"One of my assistants answers his ring, and Mr. Roe gives the following instructions over the wire: 'Make memorandum—Richard Roe—man to fix range—purchase draft—tickets for opera on Thursday evening.' My assistant makes the memorandum, repeats it to Mr. Roe, and that gentleman returns to his paper, blissfully confident that his attention will be called to the various matters in the morning.
"And so it is. In my office is a record which gives all the necessary information regarding my patrons. Therefore is recorded Mr. Roe's name, the number of his residence, the location of his office, the car he takes in going to his place of business and the hour he generally arrives there. Thus, when Mr.
Roe alights from the car in front of his office on the following morning, one of my uniformed messengers places in his hands a copy of the memorandum which he telephoned the previous evening. Thus his attention is called to his wife's commissions. They are attended to, and no dissensions take place in Mr. Roe's household."

"For the service of myself and assistants I charge of course a small fee, payable monthly. That, sir, is my mission—that is the noble work my intellect has found to do." And Benjamin Bixby, P. D. F., bowed himself out of my presence.—Chicago Tribune.

"The Destruction of Dianthy."
"You managed to laugh very heartily at that nonsensical piece at the theater last night."

"Yes. It was a kind of instance of reflex action. I got to laughing a little at some of the foolishness, and then I got to laughing at myself for laughing at all, and then I discovered that I couldn't stop."—Washington Star.

"The Manayunk Philosopher."
"When a young fellow, he's anxious to show his knowledge," said the Manayunk philosopher, "and when he gets older he's just as anxious to conceal his ignorance."—Philadelphia Record.
